HAND—In the days of hand-to-hand fighting, when missile weapons were employed by a comparatively small portion of the combatants, the vanquished were generally almost annihilated, and the victors suffered enormously. At Cannæ 40,000 Romans out of 80,000 were killed. At Hastings the Normans, though the victors, lost 10,000 out of 60,000, and at Crecy 30,000 Frenchmen out of 100,000 were, it is as-wounded. When the flint-lock reigned the average of the proportion of the killed and wounded in ten battles, beginning with Zorndorf in 1758 and ending with Waterloo, was from one-fourth to one-fifth of the troops present on both sides. The heaviest loss was at Zorndorf, where 32,916 men out of 82,000 were killed or wounded. It was also very heavy at 900 men. In the campaign of Italy, in 1859, rifles were used on both sides, and we find that the proportion of casualties to combatants was, at Margenta and Solferino, one-eleventh. In the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71, when both sides were armed with breech-loading rifles, the average proportion of killed and wounded at Worth, Spicheren, Mars-la-Tour, Gravelotte and Sedan was one-ninth, the heaviest loss being at Mars-la-Tour, where it was one-sixth, and the smallest at Sedan, where it was one-twelfth. — (The Athenæum.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

BEAUTIFUL LINES FROM THE PEN OF
GEORGE ELIOT.

The Recently Expressed Views of Heber
Newton—Faithfulness to Life's
Duty is God's Service.

In a recent letter by Rev. R. Heber Newton, of Garden City, I. I., to the New Haven Morning News, a brief synopsis of the seven discourses recently delivered by him upon the Bible, its inspiration, revelation and its uses, is given. As the reader is aware, the position taken in these sermons is regarded as radically at variance with the general tenor and beliefs of the Episcopal Church, the clergy of which Mr. Newton is a member, as well as of the Churches generally, and is considered by the religious world as an entire breaking away from orthodoxy, rather than the expression of the most advanced liberal and modern thought. The letter of Mr. Newton is long, but extracts from it cannot fail to be of interest. He says:

In the first sermon I stated the popular notion of the Bible as a book of which God is "the author," as the Westminster Confession says, a book let down from the skies, all of a piece, the work of God, and having his imprimatur, an authority, oracular and infallible, the only one which it treated. This theory, sought to show, could not be received for the following reasons, among others: "It has never been properly authenticated by the voice of the church general through her church councils; it was not the result of any deliberation for itself; it was disclaimed by Holy Scripture in its palpable indifference to historical accuracy and in the plain literary character of its writings, as brought out especially by later criticism; it was to be traced by its growth in the Jewish and Christian mind, and accounted for on natural grounds."

In the second sermon I sought to shape the view of the Bible held by scholars in increasing numbers: a view which promotes all that was essential to our reverence for the Bible. The Bible is a series of books, the apocryphal literature of the Jews, the Apxapra being included, and the literature of the Christian Church in its creative epoch. As literature these books are most of them noble and worthy of immortality, and have been the chief source of inspiration to the mental and moral life of Christendom, worthy to be called sacred books. They are in a still deeper sense our sacred books, as the literature of the people of religion, the race to whom God gave the unique mission of evolving ethical religion, whom He had endowed with a speciality for religion and through singular experiences for its normal development, and from whom, as an historical fact, had issued the one religion which might claim to have the future in its hands, the one Man who historically embodied the highest human conceptions of man and God.

In the third and fourth sermons I proceeded to apply this general conception of the Bible negatively, in the pointing out of certain wrong notions of the Bible which I enumerated and illustrated the following: The indiscriminate use of the whole Bible for all classes and ages; the indiscriminate use of the words of the Bible as the words of God; the indiscriminate use of its words as the words of history; its use as an oracle to determine our judgments; as an oracle to predict events of history; as an authority in any sphere save theology and religion; as an authority even there of equal rights in all its parts; and authority even there which is to be resorted to in the "proof text" manner, or in the use of its language otherwise than as in other literature; as an authority, even in theology of a fixed and final form.

In the fifth sermon I presented the intellectual use of the books of the Bible as literature. As such we should have these books issued like real books, separately, properly paraphrased, poetry appearing as poetry, etc., and all in a case together; we should study each book as a whole, or in part; place it in a proper historical position; know its divisions, where composite, and be able to assign them to their several historical places; and recognize through the writings of the work of the many hands which have labored over them.

In the sixth sermon I presented the proper intellectual use of the Bible, on the foundation already laid, in order to construct that faith which has always been the essential of Christian belief—the faith in a providential preparation for the divine mission of Christ. Thus I gave a bird's-eye view of the real movement of Jewish thought and life, upward toward Christ, through its various stages, from the germ of ethical religion, bodied in the ten words of Moses, according to our latter criticism—showing a real evolution in the religious life of the Jewish people, from the religion of the Christ in its old position of commanding authority, and in the new and necessary position, not of an exception to the general order of nature, but of that very order itself in the sphere of the soul. Thus the foundation is laid for the construction of science and religion in the true religion of the Christ-evolution, which is the outworking of an ideal, quickened of God.

In the last sermon I considered the right use of the Bible for the culture of personal and social character, as the providentially prepared hand-book of ethics and religion, or rather of ethical religion. It teaches not knowledge, but character; it turns the God who is the source and standard of all goodness. It presents every phase of wisdom, and in its stern, ethical spirit keeps the core of religion sound. It shows us the prudent virtues that our love, but lifts these laws of life into laws sacred and myetic, substantial and real; laws at once of nature and of the soul; laws which are none other than the shadows of the One Living God, and the light which finally speaks to us in a Man—the human ideal, the divine image.

THE CHURCH INVOLVED.

May I join the church in its
Of this immortal debt who live again
In minds made better by their presence; live
In pulses stirred to generous action;
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
Of miserable aims that end with self.
In thoughts that sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge men's minds
To vast inquiries.

To make us live in heaven;
With growing awe the growth of life of man.
So we inherit that sweet purity
For which we struggled, failed and agonized
With warring intellect that led down dead
Rebellious faith that would not be subdued,
A vision pure shining still in child,
For, anxious sentence is quick died away,
Die in the large and tender heart,
And all our rarer, better, truer self,
That sobbed religiously in veiling song,
That watched to cure the burden of the world,
Laboriously tracing what must be,
And what may yet be better—rather
A wretched image for the sanctuary
And shaped it forth before the multitude,
Divine human, rising words with love—
To higher reverence more mixed with love—
That better self shall live till human time
Shall fold its eyelids, and the human skin
Be gathered like a scroll within the tomb
Unread forever.

This is life to come,
Which martyrs have made more glorious
For us who strive to follow.
May I reach
That pure heaven—here to other souls
The cup of strength in some great agony,
Exulting heaven-ard, feel pure love,
Beget the smiles that have no cruelty,
Be the erect presence of a good life, and
And in diffusion ever more intense!
So shall I join the church in its
Which music is the gladness of the world.

Life's Duty is God's Service.

In a recent article by Rev. Dr. John Cunningham, published in the Christian Union, that divine presents the following thoughts in defense of the nobleness and divine appointment of all rightful labor,

FOR THE LADIES.

ADVANCE HINTS FOR THE COMING
SPRING WEAR.

Something to Wear—A Chapter of Feminine Gossip and Facts—Spray
Hints for the Household.

Early spring costumes have already appeared, and among these are the stylish and serviceable ones made up in a number of different ways. First are those with a plain skirt, trimmed around the foot with a ruching pinked out on each edge, and over this skirt is to be worn a "redingote john" of the same goods, fastened at the waist, and with a wide, trimmed collar and a narrow pinked ruche. Next are kilted skirts of tweed, joined to jersey bodies of a monochrome color, with a scarf drapery of the same color on the right side, and a wide, trimmed collar. The skirt is a pelrine of the tweed, lined with surah shade of the jersey. Lastly are the jaunty styles designed for young ladies who aspire to the natty and the picturesque. These are in a model of the latter description. The pattern is a plain in light and dark green, with intersecting hair lines of dark cardinal. The skirt is arranged in three flounces, laid in flat box pleats, with hem turned up on the right side, and finished with a piping of dark green. Over this is a wide, trimmed collar, and a wide, trimmed skirt. The two coats are in Louis XIV. style, with waistcoat of cardinal. At each side are wide pocket-flaps. These flaps are decorated with large silver and enameled buttons, the design being dogs, foxes and deer heads. Around the edge of each button is a narrow rim of dark cardinal enamel. The cuffs of the jacket are of gold and silver, and are three in number, placed one above the other. For the promenade or traveling wear is added a long pelisse made of the tweed and lined with cardinal; the sleeves are of the same material, and the collar is a wide ribbon of Ottoman silk, of dark green faced with cardinal; these tie in a large bow, the long end falling nearly to the bottom of the long pelisse. (Chicago Inter-Ocean.)

Belts, to which are attached dainty bags of velvet, plush or satin, cinerettes, and chains or chainette watches, will be much worn with spring costumes, especially after outside wraps are dispensed with. Some of the newest vinaigrettes and tiny bags for holding cosmetics are of gold or silver, set with precious stones, and are exquisitely carved. Others are of fine Russia leather or cream-tinted kid, delicately hand-painted and mounted with chased gold. These range in price from $5 to $25, according to the amount of gold used and the quality of the bag itself. The most expensive vinaigrettes are of fine hammered gold set with real gems. These are shaped like the Greek amphora and are attached to the wrist by a chain of fine links. Roman pearl beads have never been more fashionable than at present. The newest strings show delicate and beautiful tints of palest pink, shading to a most delicate mauve, which is only a few shades from clear and her. Other beads show a combination of the softest tints of rose, gold, pearl, and sea-green. Necklaces of Florentine and Cloisonné beads are also much worn. Some of these are encrusted with tiny stars and dots, which sparkle like gems in the sunlight. Transparent French mail is much used for handkerchiefs, decorated with tied work and simply edged with a slightly gathered ruffle of Oriental lace. In one of the latest styles, the handkerchief is worked in the center of the wreath of white silk roses, and in the center of this wreath is the initial, which must be worked very small, as large kerchiefs monograms or initials are out of fashion and now only considered appropriate for marking bed or table linen. (New York Post.)

The French descriptions of the costumes worn at the Paris opera this season read as if they had been written by a Balzac. The evening gown Countess wore a dress of sea-blue satin with a wide, trimmed collar, and a wide, trimmed skirt. The skirt was of a diamond lace hanging from a dark-blue velvet ribbon, and a diamond snake outside one of her long gloves.
